THE BOSS OF THE MEADOW.

A bumble-bee built him a nest in the ground;
Deacon McGavitt came wand'ring around,
And who," quoth the bumble-bee, "who may you be?"
"I'm boss of this meadow the deacon," said he.

The bumble-bee doubted—disputed the right,
Remarking, "I'm little, but ready for fight."
They at it they went, and the first round was claimed
By the bee; but the other replied, "You be blamed!"

A moment or two the good deacon stood fast,
His arms flopping 'round him like a windmill in blast.
While he swore like a child of original sin
Every time the bold bee his sharp stinger stuck in.

Lords! what a conflict! At each warm caress
The deacon drew back, showing signs of distress,
While the bumble-bee smiled to the end of each wing
As he tickled his foe with the tip of his sting.

The fight was soon turned by the bee to a frolic;
He doubled his enemy up like the colic,
And sent him off home, with his head far from level,
Remarking, "That bumble-bee stung like the devil!"

SUBSTITUTES FOR KISSING.

Some rude races have strange substitutes for kissing. Of a Mongol father, a traveler writes, "he smelled from time to time the head of his youngest son, a mark of paternal tenderness usual among the Mongols instead of embracing." In the Philippine islands, we are told, "the sense of smell is developed to so great a degree that they are able, by smelling at the pocket-handkerchiefs, to tell to which person they belong, and lovers, at parting, exchange pieces of linen they may be wearing, and, during their separation, inhale the odor of the beloved being." Among the Cittagong-hill people, again, it is said, "the manner of kissing is peculiar. Instead of pressing lip to lip, they place the nose and mouth upon the cheek and inhale the breath strongly." Their form of speech is not "Give me a kiss," but "Smell me." In the same way, according to another traveler, "the Burmese do not kiss each other in the Western fashion, but apply the lips and nose to the cheek, and make a strong inhalation." Moreover, "the Samoans salute by juxtaposition of noses, accompanied not by a rub, but a hearty smell." There is Scriptural precedent for such customs. When blind Isaac was in doubt whether the son who came to him was Jacob or not, "he smelled the smell of his raiment, and blessed him."

LOCATING A MAN'S BIRTHPLACE.

Many people of the present day remember the singing campaign of 1840, which elected Gen. Harrison. One of the best of the Whig speakers and singers was Mr. Joseph Hoxie. He was very popular at mass meetings, for his speeches were short, and he always interspersed them with songs and anecdotes. A friend once asked Mr. Hoxie where he was born.

"There was once a man," replied Mr. Hoxie, cocking his eye in a way that told a good story was coming, "who lived in Kentucky. He prided himself on being able to tell the State in which a person was born, if he heard him speak a few words.

"Seated in a tavern located on a turnpike, he amused himself, one day, by locating the birthplaces of the travelers who alighted.

"One traveler, getting off his horse, asked, 'Have you any oats?'

"'Yes,' answered the landlord.

"'Give my horse two quarts.'

"'That man,' said the observer, 'is from Connecticut.'

"'Landlord,' said another traveler, 'give my horse four quarts of oats.'

"'That man is from Massachusetts,' remarked the observer.

"'Have you oats, landlord?' asked a third traveler.

"'Yes.'

"'Give my horse as many oats as he can eat.'

"'That man is from Rhode Island.'

"Now," said Mr. Hoxie, "I come from the State where they give their horses all the oats they can eat."

EFFECT OF FLOWERS ON HEALTH.

An Italian professor has made some very agreeable medicinal researches, resulting in the discovery that vegetable perfumes exercise a positively healthful influence on the atmosphere, converting its oxygen into ozone, and thus increasing its oxidizing influences. The essences found to develop the largest quantity of ozone are those of the cherry, laurel, clover, lavender, mint, juniper, fennel and bergamot; those that give it in smaller quantities are anise, nutmeg and thyme. The flowers of the narcissus, mignonette, heliotrope and lily of the valley develop ozone in close vessels. Flowers destitute of perfume do not develop it, and those which have slight perfume develop it in small quantities. Reasoning from these facts, the professor recommends the cultivation of flowers in marshy districts, and in all places infested with animal emanations. The inhabitants of such regions should, he says, surround their houses with beds of the most odorous flowers.

You may be poor, you may be unknown, you may never reach distinction; still you can shut the door.—Danbury News.

Genius and Laziness.

About as foolish a notion as can lodge itself in the head of a young man is the idea that he is a genius, and, therefore, industry is not necessary to his success.

The example of Sheridan, who united in himself the endowments of three extraordinary men, being a wit, a dramatist and an orator, is not infrequently mentioned as supporting this notion.

Sheridan was a genius, and he was lazy. His indolence, however, together with his dissipated and prodigal habits—the three are natural associates—weighted him so heavily in life's race that it was only now and then he appeared among the foremost. He never reached the goal.

Even these appearances were due to spurts of hard work, to which he was spurred by the necessities of the occasion or the protests of friends.

"You know I am an ignoramus," he would say to political associates, when they urged him to make a speech on some important measure before the House of Commons, "but instruct me, and I'll do my best."

They would cram him with information, which his quick intellect mastered and arranged. Then he would prepare a speech, writing the more brilliant parts two or three times over.

The greatest speech of his life was that which he delivered in the House of Commons, against Warren Hastings, on the question whether he should be impeached for his conduct while Governor General of India. The best orators and critics placed it above all ancient and modern speeches.

Logan, one of Hastings' defenders, said to a friend, after Sheridan had spoken for an hour: "All this is declamatory assertion without proof."

"A wonderful oration!" he muttered, when the orator had consumed another hour.

"Mr. Hastings has acted very unjustifiably," was his confession at the end of the third hour.

The fourth hour drew from him the indignant assertion, "Mr. Hastings is a most atrocious criminal!"

The orator went on, and, just as he was concluding—he spoke five and a half hours—Logan exclaimed, "Of all monsters, the most enormous is Warren Hastings!"

It is not strange that Pitt, at the conclusion of the speech, moved an adjournment to give the House time "to collect its reason." Of course, it was the product of a genius who was a natural orator. But genius had been hard at work for days, preparing with elaborate care even the pettiest details of the wonderful oration.

Sheridan, though habitually lazy, could, in special emergencies, toil like a cart-horse drawing a load up hill. He had, at times, "the capacity for infinite pains-taking," which is Carlyle's definition of genius. If young men will add this idea to their notion of genius, it will do them no harm to think themselves members of that endowed class.—Youth's Companion.

AN AFFECTING LIE.

An early settler of Chicago relates an incident in which he was an actor: "As I sat there in the long ago, and, shrouded in the September haze, was dreaming of a fortunate future for myself, I heard the muffled tread of innumerable feet drawing nearer and nearer to me. The sound was like the footfall of a regiment of infantry approaching, and I rose to see what was the cause. I had not long to wait, for very soon there hove in sight a very singular spectacle. First came a large Illinois hog at the head of a long column of Illinois hogs, all marching Indian fashion, and grunting with that gentle, placid grunt which the hog carries with him. On closer examination into the singular phenomena, I saw that all the hogs, except the leader, were blind, each animal having its predecessor's tail in his mouth throughout the long line, consisting of 13,521 unfortunate, sightless hogs, cheerfully following their leader to the water. I was never so struck with the wonderful instinct of the brute creation in my life, and my eyes filled with tears when I saw the childlike faith and confidence of each blind animal following with implicit trust the more fortunate guide.

"Soon, however, a great dazzling three-cornered idea worked its way into my intellect. Dashing away my idle tears, I drew my revolver and shot on the leader's tail, leaving the long line of disconcerted and aimless hogs in the middle of the broad prairie, with no guide but the deplorably sophisticated tail of a hog who was three quarters of a mile away. Then I stole up, and, taking the gory tail in my hand, I led the frustrated phalanx down to the stock yards, and sold the outfit at 8 cents, live weight. This was the start of my dazzling career as a capitalist, a career to which I now point with pride. Thus, from a poor boy with one suspender and a pool toe, I have risen to be one of our leading business men, known and respected by all, and, by industry and economy, and by borrowing my chewing tobacco, I have come to be one of our solid men."

"Young man," said a college professor to an under-graduate who had asked for and obtained leave of absence to attend his grandmother's funeral—"young man, I find, on looking over the records, that this is the fifth time you have been excused to attend the funeral of your grandmother. Your leave of absence is therefore revoked. Your grandmother must get herself buried without you this time."

Some one has said of a fine and honorable old age that it was the childhood of immortality.

SEA-COAST SUPERSTITIONS.

Many wives by the sea-coast hold superstitions concerning the harrow-sounding and mysterious. Thus Dickens tells us that Barkis lingered in his dying until the turn of the tide, when, the tide going out, Barkis went out with it. In New England it is unlucky to kill a pig in the wane of the moon or at the ebbing of the tide; the pork will shrink in the boiling. Water in the dinner-pot evaporates more rapidly over the fire when the tide is "dead low." It is unlucky to eat fish from the head downward; it drives away the fish from the shores. To tell the stage of the tide without going to the beach, look in a cat's eyes; the pupil of every intelligent cat's eye is elongated when the tide is at the flood. Never count a catch of fish until the day's work or sport is done. Otherwise the sport is spoiled. Similarly, the seaside farmer never counts his lambs until the season for their dropping is over. But it is not alone in rural communities that men and women keep up customs and rites founded on Pagan superstitions. Among the ancient Greeks and Romans it was a custom for the bridegroom to give his bride, on the wedding night, a considerable sum of money, by way of purchase of her person. From this usage, no doubt, we have derived the custom of making wedding presents, under which so many people groan. The ancient Saxons gave a betrothal ring, or other gift, which was called a "wed," and from which we have derived a very charming word. Fifth avenue throws an old shoe after the departing bride. Is this because our remote forefathers ordained that the bridegroom should tap his new-made wife on the head with his shoe as a token of her submission to her lord?

NO LETTER FOR BURCH.

A man from Burch county, being in Custer City soon after a postoffice was established there, went up to the shanty one day with intent to inquire for mail matter. A man from Missouri was just ahead of him, and inquired if there was any letter for Zachariah Burch.

"Be you the feller?" queried the Postmaster.

"I am."

"Named Zachariah, are ye?"

"Yes, sir."

"Too infernal long for this country. You'd better chop it in two."

"I axed if there was a letter here for Zachariah Burch," said the Missourian, with a bad gleam in his eyes.

"And I heard ye, and there ain't nothing of the sort here."

"Kinder seems to me there is."

"Then I'm a liar?"

The pair looked at each other for a minute, and then Burch remarked:

"Mebbe you are."

Uncle Sam's official hopped out of his den and went for Zachariah Burch. It was a pretty even match for ten minutes, and then the Postmaster got his favorite hold. Soon after that event Mr. Burch observed:

"Stranger, I reckon it's no use to prolong this sorrowful affair."

"I reckon not, but ye inquired for a letter for Burch."

"Yes."

"And you give it to me purty strong that sich a letter had arriv."

"Yes, I did," replied Burch, as he felt of his left ear to see what portion was left for future fights, "but I've bin thinkin' powerful hard in the last ten minits, and I guess the old woman back in Missouri has put off writin' till next Sunday. Let's go out and take suthin' to bring tears to our eyes."

NARROW ESCAPE OF PROF. WATSON.

Speaking of astrology in China, I am reminded of the unceremonious way in which the late Prof. Watson, of Ann Arbor University, Michigan, was compelled to quit the Chinese empire about the time of the transit of Venus a few years ago. Prof. Watson, with another well-known astronomer, was at the Chinese capital. The Emperor of China was taken sick with the small-pox, and he died after a short illness. The event was looked upon, as all great events are in China, as influenced by the stars, and it became noised abroad that the two distinguished astronomers had so influenced the stars as to cause the Emperor's death. The Viceroy, who did not share in the popular belief, quietly informed the astronomers that they might lose their lives if they did not go away. They departed in the night.—Interview with Prof. J. W. Draper.

THE STEADY TALKER.

Conversation is a very serious thing with some people. They talk all day, and the fact that they say nothing does not in the slighest degree interfere with the steady flow of words. One of this sort on board the train was asked a very simple question by a fellow-passenger. She made a deprecating gesture and replied: "Excuse me, sir, but I am only going to the next station, and it's not worth while to begin a conversation."

News, like other animate matter, when it is once dispatched is dead.

The Parsees of Bombay.

Seeing for the first time hosts of men going through the streets wearing what looked like a section of stovepipe glazed and then dotted all over with infinitesimal felt specks, said stovepipe minus a rim and the back bent down toward the front as if intended to be used as a whistle in an emergency, the natural impulse is to shout with laughter; and it is only when this "shocking hat" is understood to be the badge of the persecution, their cross put upon them in derision, which they have carried gladly and proudly, despising the shame for faith's sake; and so elevated to the dignity of a crown, we bend before it in respectful reverence. The Parsees are immensely rich and powerful, no matter whether that wealth was acquired by inheritance, by frugality or commerce. Splendid and luxuriant carriages drawn by two, and not infrequently four, blooded Arabian horses, with a syce or footman running on either side of the coach, roll through the streets and throng the "bunder" or quay, where the band plays at sunset, and usually from among the cushions rises the gloomy spire of the Parsee's improbable hat, much to the disappointment of the "bunder," who has stood earnestly expecting that no one short of a Viceroy or a Governor General would turn upon of such splendid surroundings.

But the pleasure of peculiar dress is carried to such an extreme by the male sex that the females have nothing to do but array themselves like the lilies of the field; clothed in silks and satins whose silken and gold embroidery emit a sheen which fairly dazzles Western eyes; loaded with jewels, festooned with strings of pearls, arms weighed down with bangles and legs covered with silver anklets nearly to the knee, veiled in gold or silver gauze, shod in sandals of satin which touch not the soil of the streets; they walk or sit beside their husbands, the realization of all one's early dreams of Oriental splendor. Even the children are clothed in embroidered silks and laden with bangles, till one is forced to conclude that it is only upon reaching man's estate that one is permitted to wear the dress which gives him his peculiar place among the religious people of the Eastern world.—Springfield Republican.

Trencher-Mates.

In six weeks I was as much at home as if I had been a Mohammedan all my life. I formed friends, had little fits and jealousies with my companions in the household—we all having the same interest—and even eating out of the same plates, without offering to bite, though the disposition to do so is so strong as to be barely under control. Darwinites may safely take my word for this fact, and are at liberty to make use of it as a startling analogy. My trencher-mates were a blind Moulvi (Doctor of Divinity) and a gentleman with only two fingers on his right hand, the only one with which a Mohammedan may take food. I had, with infinite pains, worked this myself, thinking I would stand a better chance; but the first time I sat down I found I had immensely underrated my friends' abilities, for I never saw two men with such an alarming capacity for curry and rice, or who showed such extraordinary skill at putting it away. At first I was a little fastidious, and had rather a prejudice in favor of not seeing a greasy black hand secreting merrily among my food. I did not seem to enjoy it as much as I ought; however, it was only a prejudice which I had to overcome. I began by imagining lines drawn over the dish, separating a corner of it to myself, and operating inside those bounds. This sort of thing did not last long; the two-fingered gentleman's two long fingers would come angling along through my free will before I had got my third mouthful swallowed, or the Moulvi's skinny hand would wave like a mesmeric pass over the dish, scattering grains of rice that had stuck to his fingers from the last mouthful over it, and then alight on my most meaty morsel, a piece I had perhaps had my eye on from the first; but it would have shown greedy haste on my part to have taken it so early in the play. No; I hadn't a chance with these two thieves, for they got away five-sixths of the mess every meal, and with such grace, too. "Bless you," they would say, "how little you eat, Mohammed Amin!" as they shared the last mouthful between them.—"A Visit to Mecca," Keane.

Respecting the Sabbath.

The people of a New Hampshire town are so fearfully lazy that when the wife of a minister who had just settled in that town asked a prominent citizen if the inhabitants generally respected the Sabbath and refrained from business he replied: "Confound it, ma'am, they don't do enough work in a whole week to break the Sabbath, if it was all done on that day."

Scene at Continental kursaal: English party at card table—"Hello, we are two to two." English party at opposite table—"We are two to two, too." German spectator, who "speaks English," to companion who is acquiring the language—"Vell, now you see how dis is. Of you want to gife expression to yourself in English all you have to do is to blay mit der French horn!"

Question—Why is love always represented as a child? A.—Because it never reaches the age of experience. Q.—Still, old men have been known— A.—Yes; but they were in their second childhood.

Here is the account of the shortest courtship on record: "Rachel, the Lord hath sent me to marry thee," said the suitor. "The Lord's will be done," was the submissive reply.

BRIDGEPORT, NOVEMBER 5, 1881.

Job Printing.—Job printing of the finest description will be furnished at this office at Sacramento prices.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Quick Work.—It has been reserved for the law officers of Mono county to give an emphatic negative to the proverbial "law's delay." On October 28th, a cutting affray occurred in Bodie, in which a Chinawoman was quite seriously injured. On Wednesday last District Attorney Parker, having been informed that no complaint had been filed against the assailant, swore out a warrant before Judge Wiggin, of the Superior Court, sitting as a magistrate. Sheriff Showers promptly served the warrant, and returned the accused here at one o'clock on Thursday. He was examined before Judge Wiggin the same afternoon, Parker and McQuaid appearing for the People, and R. S. Miner for the defendant, and was held to answer on a charge of assault with intent to murder. The District Attorney at once filed an information; the defendant was arraigned at eight o'clock, a demurrer to the information argued and overruled, a plea of not guilty entered, and the case set for trial on Wednesday next, the 9th inst., at one o'clock in the afternoon, and a special jury ordered summoned for his trial. This promptness is commendable, and is much better than keeping him for an indefinate time at expense of the county. If the State is to care for him, it might as well have him at once.

Something for Bodie.—Two years ago when Bodie aspired to be incorporated, we suggested an application to the Board of Supervisors, as Grass Valley, Truckee and other towns had; but they couldn't see it. Now comes the following:

"National City, San Diego county, on petition of its citizens, has been incorporated as a town by the Board of Supervisors. An election of five Trustees, a Marshal and Recorder is ordered for November 5th."

If incorporated, Bodie could have clean streets, good sidewalks, and, at one dollar per head, a revenue of $17,000 a year from its dogs. Try it!

Another.—The Central and Southern Pacific Railroads folks have organized a Company to build a railroad from Modesto to Bodie. As it is proposed to take the route adopted by the California and Nevada Company, it looks very much like a bluff.

Transit of Mercury.—On Monday the tranit of Mercury across the disc of the sun occurs, commencing at six minutes past two o'clock in the afternoon, and ending at twenty-six minutes, fifty seconds past seven. It will not occur again until November 9th, 1891.

Religious.—Rev. Mr. Nims will hold services at the usual place to-morrow morning and evening. All are invited to attend. Sunday School at the School House at 2 o'clock P. M.

Deeds.—During the month of October there were recorded in the County Recorder's office 46 deeds—16 real estate and 30 mining.

Billiard Parlor.—Under "New To-Day" it will be noticed that the genial and popular "Curly" can be found at the Parlor Saloon, Loose's Building.

The Standard.—The Standard Con. Co. has declared its usual monthly dividend of $75,000, payable the 12th inst.

Bodie Road.—The California and Nevada Railroad Company has increased its capital stock from $2,500,000 to $6,250,000.

Mortages.—During the month of October 5 mortgages were recorded and 5 released.

Board of Supervisors.—The Board of Supervisors will meet in regular session on next Monday, the 7th inst.

A. B. Stewart, Druggist, Bodie, has drugs, medicines, paints, oils, ammunition and cartridges

The Weather.—The weather this week has been pleasant, fires for comfort, during the day, not being required.

Next Week.—Several advertisements, too late for this issue, will appear next week.

Mining Transfers.

The following deeds have been recorded in the County Recorder's office:

S. C. Perkins to Ben H. Miller, 750 feet each of Lookout and Dexter mines, Patterson.

John Tucker to Daniel Ashley, one-sixth of Golden Eagle and one-fourth of Golden Rule mines, Clover.

John Lamb to T. M. Luther, one-third of Great Western mine, Patterson.

N. H. Fennell to John W. Stewart, ¼ of Lord Byron mine, Homer.

Transfers of Real Estate.

The following deeds have been recorded in the County Recorder's office:

John B. Thornton to Rosenwald, Coblentz & Co., ¼ of lot on north side of Main street, Lundy, $374 06.

Annie J. Parker to John A. McQuaid, lot on north side of Main street, Bridgeport $50).

Lincoln in Congress.

In December, 1847, Abraham Lincoln took his seat in Congress as a Representative from the State of Illinois. It was not long before he became a great favorite with the members and officers of the House, for his genial manners, pleasant voice and ready wit gave him a magnetic influence on all who came within his social sphere. He possessed but few personal attractions, his figure being tall and ungainly; but these deficiencies were amply compensated for by his many shining qualities of mind and heart. He was a fluent and ready speaker, and his speeches were remarkable for their directness and precision, although lacking in rhetorical grace and finish. He possessed a rich and inexhaustible fund of wit and humor, to which he gave expression in anecdotes and quaint observations, which it was a pleasant to listen to. Whenever he obtained the floor to speak, the House gave him its undivided attention, and it never failed to greet his sallies of wit and quick repartees with laughter and applause. One of the most remarkable of his speeches during his first and only term in Congress was delivered in July, 1848, in reply to one made a few days before by Mr. Iverson, of Georgia. The subject of Mr. Lincoln's speech was "Military Coat Tails." In the speech of Mr. Iverson, that gentleman accused the Whig party of having deserted all their principles and taken shelter under the military coat-tail of Gen. Zachary Taylor, the candidate of that party for the Presidency. In the course of his remarks Mr. Lincoln proceeded to show that the Democratic party were amenable to a similar charge, having for twenty-five years relied upon the military reputation of Gen. Jackson for success, he having been made President out of it for eight years, while although he remained to make Presidents of several comparatively small men who succeeded him, and after lying upon it for the success of Gen. Cass, the nominee of the party at that time, their campaign papers everywhere declaring that Cass and Butler were of the "true hickory stripe." Toward the close of his speech Mr. Lincoln poured a torrent of ridicule upon the military reputation of Gen. Cass, and then alluded to his own exploits in the Black Hawk war; "where," he continued, "I fought, bled, and came away. If Gen. Cass saw any live fighting Indians at the battle of the Thames, where he served as Aide de Camp to Gen. Harrison, it was more than I did; but I had a good many bloody struggles with mosquitoes, and, although I never fainted from the loss of blood, I can truly say I was often very hungry. Mr. Speaker," added Mr. Lincoln, "if I should ever conclude to fall whatever our Democratic friends may suppose there is of black-cockade Federalism about me, and thereupon they shall take me up as their candidate for the Presidency, I protest they shall not make fun of me as they have of Gen. Cass by attempting to write me into a military hero."

The notes of Mr. Lincoln's speech on this occasion were written on sheets of foolscap paper, and lay on the desk before him. It was not many minutes after he had begun to speak before he abandoned his manuscript, and walked slowly down the narrow aisle leading to the area in front of the Clerk's desk and Speaker's chair. He carried his left arm behind him, and with it slightly lifted the skirts of a black swallow-tail coat, worn nearly threadbare, which hung loosely from his shoulders, while his right arm was extended, and his long, bony forefinger pointed toward his auditors on the opposite side of the hall. As he walked he spoke with great earnestness, until he had crossed the area and stood face to face with the Democratic Representatives, when he would quickly turn, and, hurrying back to his desk, look at his desk, look at his manuscript for a moment, and then resume his walk. When the Speaker's hammer fell he returned to his seat amid peals of laughter and applause, which continued for several minutes before order was restored and the regular business of the House resumed.

Mr. Lincoln's seat in the old Hall of Representatives was on the outer row, and near the western entrance. The marble statue erected to his memory stands within six feet of the spot formerly occupied by his chair and desk.—Washington Star.

How and Where Globes Are Made.

It is a fact not known, perhaps, by many readers that Troy is one of the largest and best producers of school and library globes in the country. The manufacture was begun in this city in 1852. At first only a ball five inches in diameter was made, but a ten-inch terrestrial globe was soon added. The list of sizes was rapidly increased. The balls are made in Boston but the appendages are supplied and the globes mounted and shipped in this city, where are owned the plates from which the maps are printed.

Globe-making is a skillful and delicate process. The maps are printed in small sections on English drawing paper, and these segments must be so nicely put upon the hollow ball of paper mache that there shall be not the slightest break in the alignment of letters or the continuity of lines when the smooth and painted surface is complete. Three months are required to construct one of these worlds in miniature from the time that the ball is begun until it rests in its frame or sits aloft upon a brass, bronze or nickel standard. And it must be so trimmed and mounted that it will have no disinclination to change its inclination in the frame and will hang so truly in space that it will halt in its revolution at any time when so commanded and remain motionless, as its centre of gravity were in touch equally distant from all points upon the circumference. If the globe refuse to rest with any other country than America or top, the maker will be deemed more patriotic than skillful. The sizes manufactured for general use range from three to thirty inches in diameter, and from $2 to $225 in price, and are mounted in forty different styles.—Troy Times.

It is announced that "each button on the dress has a separate design." It also usually has an eye to its own advantage.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

ADVERTISE

BRIDGEPORT CHRONICLE-UNION

ORIGINAL DEFECTIVE

THE UNION.

BRIDGEPORT, NOVEMBER 5, 1881.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

MUFFINS.—One pint of sour milk, piece of melted butter size of an egg, two teaspoonfuls saleratus, flour enough for a stiff batter.

CAULIFLOWER.—This is a very pretty addition to a jar of pickled cabbage, but it must be put in salt and water for two days first before it is added to the cabbage.

TEA CAKE.—Four cups flour, four cups sweet milk, two eggs, two spoonfuls cream of tartar, one teaspoonful saleratus, small piece of butter, sweeten if you like.

WHIP CREAM.—Half a pound of powdered sugar, juice of two lemons, one gill of sherry. Mix and add one pint of thick, rich cream. Set on ice, whip to a strong froth, and serve in glasses.

CRAIGIE TOAST.—Three eggs, beaten well, one green chili cut fine, the inside of two tomatoes cut into small pieces, a little milk and one ounce butter, all mixed together with a little salt, then heated and served on hot toast.

SHRIMP SAUCE.—Take half a pint of shrimps, pick out all the meat from the tails, pound the rest in a mortar with the juice of half a lemon and a piece of butter; pass the whole through a sieve. Make a pint of melted butter; put the meat from the tails into it, add a dust of cayenne, and when the sauce boils stir into it the shrimp butter that has come through the sieve, with or without a table-spoonful of cream.

PORK CHOPS.—Cut some cutlets from a neck of pork, trim them neatly and take off the chine bone; give them a few blows with the bat, and grill them over or in front of the fire; sprinkle them with salt and arrange them in a circle on a dish, with mashed potatoes in the center and the following sauce round them: Put a large piece of butter, rolled in flour, in a stewpan, slightly rubbed with garlic; add mushrooms and a little chopped shalot; moisten with equal quantities of vinegar and broth; add salt and grated nutmeg; strain, boil it up; add a little mustard, stir well and serve.

APPLE COMPOTE.—Peel, core and halve six large apples, trimming them so as to get them all of a size; drop them as they are done into cold water with the juice of a lemon squeezed into it to prevent their turning brown. Have ready a strong sirup (made with one pound of sugar and quart of water) boiling hot; put the apples into this, with the thin rind of a lemon and two or three cloves. As soon as they are cooked—great care must be taken that they do not break—take them out and dispose them, concave side uppermost, on a glass dish; place a piece of currant jelly or quince jelly in the hollow of each apple, then well reduce the sirup and when cold pour as much of it as is necessary under the apples.

ICED CAKES.—The following mode of icing cakes was taught many years ago by a clever cook: Pound some loaf sugar in a mortar, then sift it till it is like fine dust. Beat some whites of eggs to a froth, and mix the sugar with them til the whole is a stiff paste. Take a little of this paste and place it in another dish; add to it a very little prepared oatmeal, just enough to give it a pink tinge. When the cakes are drawn from the oven lay the white icing smoothly all over; then, through a cone of stiff notepaper, squeeze the pink icing in patterns on the top of the white. Stand the cakes in a cool oven for ten minutes, then put away in a dry place. To give greater consistency to the icing, some people add powdered starch, but it is not, of course, so nice to eat. The proportions are, for the icing described, one-half pound of sugar to the whites of two eggs. For safe traveling the cake should be packed in a round cake-tin which fits it, that again being inclosed in a wooden box.

ANCIENT RITES.

One very ancient Greek ceremony strangely enough, has survived to our times. It is the cutting off the tip of a tongue at the dinner-table and keeping it "for luck." The origin of this which is mentioned in Homer, Sophocles and Aristophanes, seems to have been the symbolical offering to the gods of the organ of voice, the interpres lingua through which even animals, birds especially, were thought to utter sounds communicating to the "the knowing" (i. e., to the impostors, the priests) the will of the gods. These "tongue-tips," which last for many years, and become in time as hard as a piece of wood, I have known to be kept in families who could never be induced to throw them away as "rubbish!"—Fraser's Magazine.

WHAT a Pennsylvania man told Nordhoff, of the New York Herald: "Where are the great men of Pennsylvania? you ask. Well, there are none, and there never were any. I don't know how to account for it, but that big State never had a great man unless she borrowed him. A good many years ago, at a great public dinner in Philadelphia, I think it was Mr. George Ticknor Curtis or some other man of a sharp tongue, who late in the evening gave as a toast: 'The three great statesmen of Pennsylvania—Benjamin Franklin, of Massachusetts; Albert Gallatin, of Switzerland; and Gouverneur Morris, of New York'—and it is unpleasant for me, a Pennsylvanian, to confess that we have not got any further than that yet."

FACTS FOR THE CURIOUS.

THE razor-fish, though it lives in salt water, seems to abhor salt.

THE tusks in a full-grown male elephant sometimes are ten feet long.

THE white shark sometimes attains the enormous weight of 10,000 pounds.

IN high mountain altitudes the boiling point of water becomes so low that food cannot be cooked in it.

IN hot climates the eight-armed cuttle-fish sometimes becomes of such size as to measure twelve feet across its center and to have each of its arms between forty and fifty feet long.

ANCIENT Rome was divided into fourteen quarters. It had seventeen prisons, eleven basilicas or courts of justice, 123 temples dedicated to the gods, nine circuses and three amphitheaters.

THERE are no fewer than six different breeds of ponies in Britain, varying in height from seven and a half to fourteen and a half hands. They are the Shetland, the Welsh, the New Forest, the Exmoor and the Yorkshire moor.

DR. WALLASTON, the distinguished scientist, who first made platinum useful for the arts, obtained wires of platinum, gold and silver, in excessive tenuity, by first drawing the metals into a fine wire, which he covered with silver. The diameter of the infusoria is but one 250,000,000th of an inch. Yet Ehrenberg asserts that he has seen infusoria provided with 200 stomachs. Miraculous monads are they are, to use Hood's old expression, "dwellings and pasture grounds" for other animalcules still less.

DUJARDIN observed that when a millepora (a species of coral) attempted to climb up the side of a vase, it could improvise, as it were, on the instant, and at the expense of its own substance, a provisional foot, which stretched itself out rapidly, and performed all the functions of a permanent member. When its task was done the foot was at once absorbed into the body.

A POPULAR notion existed in the olden times that thunder prognosticated evil or good, according to the day of the week on which it occurred. If it occurred on Sunday, it brought about the death of learned men, Judges and soldiers; on Tuesday, it augured plenty of grain; on Wednesday, death of harlots and bogbeds; on Thursday, it brought plenty of sheep and corn; on Friday, "the slaughter of a great man and other horrible murders;" on Saturday, pestilence and cold. It was also a popular fancy that the ringing of bells in populous cities dissipated thunder.

THE soundings made in the Atlantic show its bottom to be an extensive plateau, varying in depths at different points. The average depth is 12,000 feet, though the steamer Cyclops obtained a depth of 15,000 feet. This ocean floor begins about 150 miles from the Irish coast, where the descent from the shallow to deep water is very rapid, reaching 10,500 feet in fifty miles, giving an angle of descent greater than that of the Alps. The deepest part of the Atlantic is on the American side, near the banks of Newfoundland, where a great basin exists ranging east and west nearly 1,600 miles, and whose depth is believed to exceed the highest of the Himalaya mountains.

TRAIN IT.

A writer in the Chicago Express, who may know to his own cost how an editor's memory suffers in the public service, from the necessity of the "skimming" he speaks of, offers some good suggestions which young people, at least, may profit by:

"Your memory is bad, perhaps, but there are two ways of curing the worst memory. One of them is to read a subject when interested; the other is to not only read, but think. When you have read a paragraph or a page, stop, close the book, and try to remember the ideas on the page, and not only call them vaguely to mind, but put them in words and speak them out. Faithfully follow these two rules, and you have the golden keys of knowledge.

"Beside inattentive reading, there are other things injurious to the memory. One is the habit of skimming over newspapers, items of news, smart remarks, items of information, political reflections, fashion notes, so that all is a confused jumble, never to be thought of again, thus diligently cultivating a habit of careless reading hard to break. Another is the reading of trashy novels."

Tremor of Great Orators.

It is a curious fact that great orators seldom fail to be nervous with apprehension, when about to make an important speech. Luther, for his last years, trembled, when he entered the pulpit. The same is true of Robert Hall. Mr. Gough confesses that he is always in a tremor in coming before an audience. Many of the leaders of the House of Commons in England have given similar testimony.

Canning said he could always tell in advance when he was about to make one of his best speeches by a chill running through him, caused by a fear of failure. Lord Derby, the father of the present Earl, when a young man, was one of the most impressive speakers in Parliament. He was known as the "Prince Rupert of debate," and seemed to be so possessed as to be incapable of embarrassment. But he said:

"When I am going to speak, my throat and lips are as dry as those of a man who is going to be hanged."

Tierney, whom Lord Macaulay calls one of the most fluent debaters ever known, said he never rose in Parliament without feeling his knees knock together. It is one of the compensations of nature, that the nervous temperament which occasions the trembling is also one of the causes of oratorical success.

WOMEN are such inconsistent creatures! We heard a young lady remark—rather indignantly, it must be confessed—that she hated "that Biggs fellow, he is such a soft cake!" Well, in less than three months she took the cake.—Boston Transcript.
